Biography

Maurice Stucke is a tenured Associate Professor of Law at the University of Tennessee College of Law. Professor Stucke joins GeyerGorey LLP after six years of teaching law and thirteen years at the United States Department of Justice. He joins as of counsel and will continue with full-time teaching at Tennessee while serving in this position.

Since joining the faculty at Tennessee in 2007, Professor Stucke has been one of the most, if not the most, prolific and influential writers on antitrust topics in the country. His work has been published in, among other journals, Northwestern, Connecticut, Illinois, Loyola, Boston College, St. John's, the Antitrust Law Journal, the Federal Communications Law Journal, and the Columbia Business Law Review. He and Allen Grunes have frequently collaborated on articles on antitrust and the media.

In addition to his teaching and writing, Professor Stucke has lectured extensively in the United States and in many other countries including China, France, Germany, the United Kingdom, and Australia. He serves as a Senior Fellow at the American Antitrust Institute (AAI), an independent Washington, D.C.-based non-profit organization devoted to competition policy. He has been elected to the Academic Society for Competition Law, appointed to the Advisory Board of the Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies, and was asked to serve as a non-governmental adviser to the International Competition Network, the only international body devoted exclusively to competition law enforcement, with members representing national and multinational competition authorities in more than 100 jurisdictions.

Professor Stucke has received a number of awards including a Fulbright fellowship to teach at the China University of Political Science and Law in Beijing, the W. Allen Separk Faculty Scholarship Award for his article "Does the Rule of Reason Violate the Rule of Law?," and the Jerry S. Cohen Memorial Fund Writing Award for his article "Behavioral Economists at the Gate: Antitrust in the Twenty-First Century." His articles have been cited by the U.S. federal courts, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, various competition agencies and policymakers, both in the United States and abroad.
